*ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT as defined by TIAW means contributing to the ability of women to earn a living or make an economic impact, as distinct from other very worthy contributions that are outside of the scope of these awards. For example, activities that would NOT be within our criteria would be creating or participating in social programs, such as programs to support motherhood, family planning, health care, childcare etc. Many educational programs DO meet the criteria if their purpose or effect is to enable women to earn money themselves or enable other women to earn money or develop financial security. Business training for women, financial literacy programs for women would be good examples of programs that DO align with the World of Difference 100 Awards criteria. If you wish further clarification, please contact TIAW.
